PRESS RELEASE

The National Socialist Movement (NSM88.ORG) is pleased to announce the addition of Matthew Heimbach, former leader of the Traditionalist Worker's Party (TWP), to the ranks of the National Socialist Movement as Director of Community Outreach.

According to NSM Commander Jeff Schoep, "Our new Director of Community Outreach will closely work with public and international relations, as well as various other community outreach projects. Matthew has led on front lines here in the United States, and has been a featured speaker in Europe; his activist experience and charismatic skill set are a great addition to our struggle." The NSM welcomes Matthew Heimbach and those whom have fought alongside of him; they are true warriors of our folk.

Uniting the best and brightest minds together under the NSM banner will bring about victory instead of disarray and infighting. Now is the time to show the enemies of our people the strength of a united front.

A new era of National Socialism has been unleashed upon the United States.

These are desperate times for our nation. It is time for all good men and women to come together to face off against the evil which has consumed our land.

About the National Socialist Movement

The National Socialist Movement was founded in 1974 and is the largest National Socialist organization in the United States. As National Socialists, we believe in the principle of self-determination and oppose the current political system in America that only represents global financial interests and multinational corporations, at the expense of our planet and our ethnic community. We are political and social advocates for White families, working to advance policies of economic and social empowerment through community organizing and political engagement.
